The Man who loved Nature

Adam loved all animals. Although he feared some, he did not want to see any of them suffering. One day, as he was driving, he came across a dog that had been hit by a motorist. He wondered by the motorist who had hit it.

As he drove on, he marveled at the vast area of land that was full of stone buildings. He wondered how it would have looked beautiful if it was all surrounded by trees and sweet smelling flowers. Bees would be happily collecting nectar, birds and monkeys would fill the air with their melodious songs.

Ahead of him, he saw a donkey. It was pulling a cart full of logs and timber, it looked tired and hungry but there was a man whipping it. This man was not only a threat to the donkey but also to the environment because he had cut down trees and this could lead to desertification.
